

7 Bold Remodeling Ideas to Look Out for in 2023

What better way to ring in the New Year than to give your home an extensive facelift that not only looks brand new, but fancy and cutting edge, too? You can achieve this by making strategic changes with a touch of boldness. No need to go overboard – pick and choose what you like and make it your own.

Whether it's accentuating one wall, going for bright colors and unique textures, or incorporating a room to make it multifunctional, the possibilities are endless. Here are a few of our suggestions to add to your remodeling plan for 2023.

Elite Remodeling Business Update - December 2022

1. Wellness-based remodel

We've all been through so much these past couple of years, and we deserve a haven in our homes. Your remodel project is the perfect opportunity to boost both your mental and physical health. You can go with room addition and create a home gym, meditation room, or spa area. Why not make your bathroom more resort-like? Install a curbless shower and add some greenery.

Wellness design also means choosing organic and sustainable materials, installing water filters, and improving the air quality of your home.

2. Multifunctional rooms are still in

Even if you're not seeking from home anymore or using your bedroom or dining room as your office, using your space effectively is always a good idea. Multifunctional rooms will still be a thing in 2023. Your guest bedroom can also be a home office, your laundry room can have a vanity or a hobby corner, and an unused area or corner can become a great storage solution.

Depending on what rooms you have and your house's layout, you can really play around and unlock your home's full potential.

3. Bold colors take over

Whether you want to have a statement wall, bring some contrast to a room, or level up your place, bold colors are the way to do it. You can brighten up the color of your kitchen cabinets, top colorful throw pillows, or get a funky wallpaper. You can choose your color palette or break all the rules and have fun with it.

4. More is more

It seems like we're moving away from minimalism and opting more and more for maximalism. It could be to embrace this trend, there's so much you can do. Play around with textures and patterns, add even more colors, and express yourself through home decor and statement pieces.

5. Round edges galore

From rounded furniture to wall niches, modern architecture is all about combining form and function. Even washbasin, kitchen islands, barstools, and windows are getting more circular. If you incorporate this trend into your remodel project, you'll have to get a cooler and more interesting home.

6. Vintage is back

If you want to jump on the vintage trend train, you may want to start by updating your floor. Be bold and choose patterns and shapes that will bring the old-world charm to your kitchen or bathroom.

Also, explore vintage-looking sinks, cabinets, doors – the list goes on. Even combining modern and vintage is a good idea if you don't have to go full retro. For example, you can have the latest appliances and mid-century cabinets with open-storage solutions.

7. Embrace the outdoors

A home remodel is an excellent opportunity to turn a part of your backyard space into a space for family gatherings and even parties. Custom kitchens can be equipped with a range of useful items such as pizza ovens, barbecue grills, and that can be incorporated into the bold redesign of your home to make for a truly eye-catching aesthetic that leaves a lasting impression.
